If you believe in Change, If you believe in Dayton

Esrati on Twitter: "Y do software updates always seem 2 take longer when u have stuff 2 do? This is the modern watched pot not boiling." - 35 minutes ago

Should Bill Nuti still have a job?

Esrati

David Esrati has been blogging since 2005 about Dayton OH and how to improve it. Issues include sprawl, economic development, education, taxes, politics and where to have a good time in Dayton.

1. Should Bill Nuti still have a job?

The jobs leaving Dayton are one thing, the driving force for them leaving are another.

If I was an NCR shareholder, I'd be looking at this move and wondering- besides the tax breaks, what competitive advantage does moving to Georgia offer. $60 million is chump change to a company that pulls down $5 billion a year. There has to be more to it.

Comparing cost of living in Dayton to Atlanta: Dayton wins.

Cost of commercial real estate in Dayton: Dayton wins.

Cost of moving 1200 people to Georgia, or filling positions of those who won't move? Staying in Dayton wins.

Traffic congestion: Dayton wins.

Access to water, which is already a big problem in Georgia, South Carolina and northern Florida: Dayton wins.

Yes, you can get on a flight direct to Shanghai in Atlanta- but, have you ever heard of teleconferencing? I'm sure Nuti knows about it- since he tried to manage NCR from NYC, where he also entered NCR into a high rent office so he could chum around with his other CEO buddies.

And, last but not least, lets look at the company performance under Nuti- who took the helm on Aug 8, 2005. Besides a bump for selling off Terradata, the crown jewel of NCR's technology portfolio, he's lost about 2/3rds of its value.

Take a look at the stock chart: http://finance.yahoo.com/echarts?s=NCR#chart2:symbol=ncr;range=20050808,20090602;indicator=volume;charttype=line;crosshair=on;ohlcvalues=0;logscale=on;source=undefined

For this, he takes home at least $4 million a year. On an hourly basis, that's almost $2K an hour. Shareholders, are you paying attention?

Lose Bill Nuti, stay in Dayton and ride out the economic downturn. This move could be suicidal for NCR, but Bill Nuti will still do just fine.

2. It's time for you to do something about corporate welfare

Politicians make lousy venture capitalists.

The idea that government incentives can keep, or bring jobs to a community in an auction which pits one community against another is insanity.

I thought I'd share my thoughts on NCR moving to Georgia with you via video- please remember, no teleprompter, camera operator or edits- this is just a face-to-laptop recording.

Click here to view the embedded video.

I highly recommend endorsing the ideas presented by The New Rules Project: Eliminate Subsidies for Big Business

It's time to contact every legislator you know and call for an end to this practice of corporate welfare.

3. As NCR leaves, our "leaders" forget their spines

I'm waiting for just one elected politician to stop and say, "Wait a second, before you leave, how about you pay us back all the breaks we gave you."

But, it's not going to happen.

As P&G announced that they were going to collect Iams and whisk them down to Mason, no one said, "But, you are still getting a tax abatement from us, if you renege, we want it back." In fact, a case could be made that Iams' former CEO Clay Mathile, and recipient of $2.1 billion from P&G should have repaid the citizens of Vandalia for their investment in Iams with the abatements that were granted his company.

As Georgia buys our 2nd largest employer out from under us, we should be declaring war against the peach state. Using tax dollars to poach jobs should be a federal crime.

As NCR announces that they're pulling out, we've got the Governor waving your hard-earned money at them, a state senator waiting until the official announcement, and a county commissioner first complaining

TRUNK MONKEY

Web 2.0 concepts

- Content is separate from presentation
- Community is key
- Your customers control your brand

websitetology

What is a Blog?

WEB LOG

websitetology

Note: personally, I hate the word blog and wish it would die a quick death.

It is a website. Utilizing a sophisticated Content Management System (CMS)

websitetology

Why blogs are important:

- Updated frequently
- Good clean code: W3C, CSS
- Low cost
- High interactivity: RSS
- Search engines love them

websitetology

Talking in code

- HTML - Hyper Text Markup Language
- CSS - Cascading Style Sheets
- W3C, 508, Meta data

websitetology

What is Open Source?

websitetology

Open Source Code

- Free to use, modify, add to, enhance
- Many developers, working for love
- Size of community usually correlates to quality
- Becoming a way of life
- Linux, WordPress, CiviCRM, Zurmo

Open Source Business

websitetology

Active web site - Back end database

- Content management system
- Searchable
- Editable
- Live

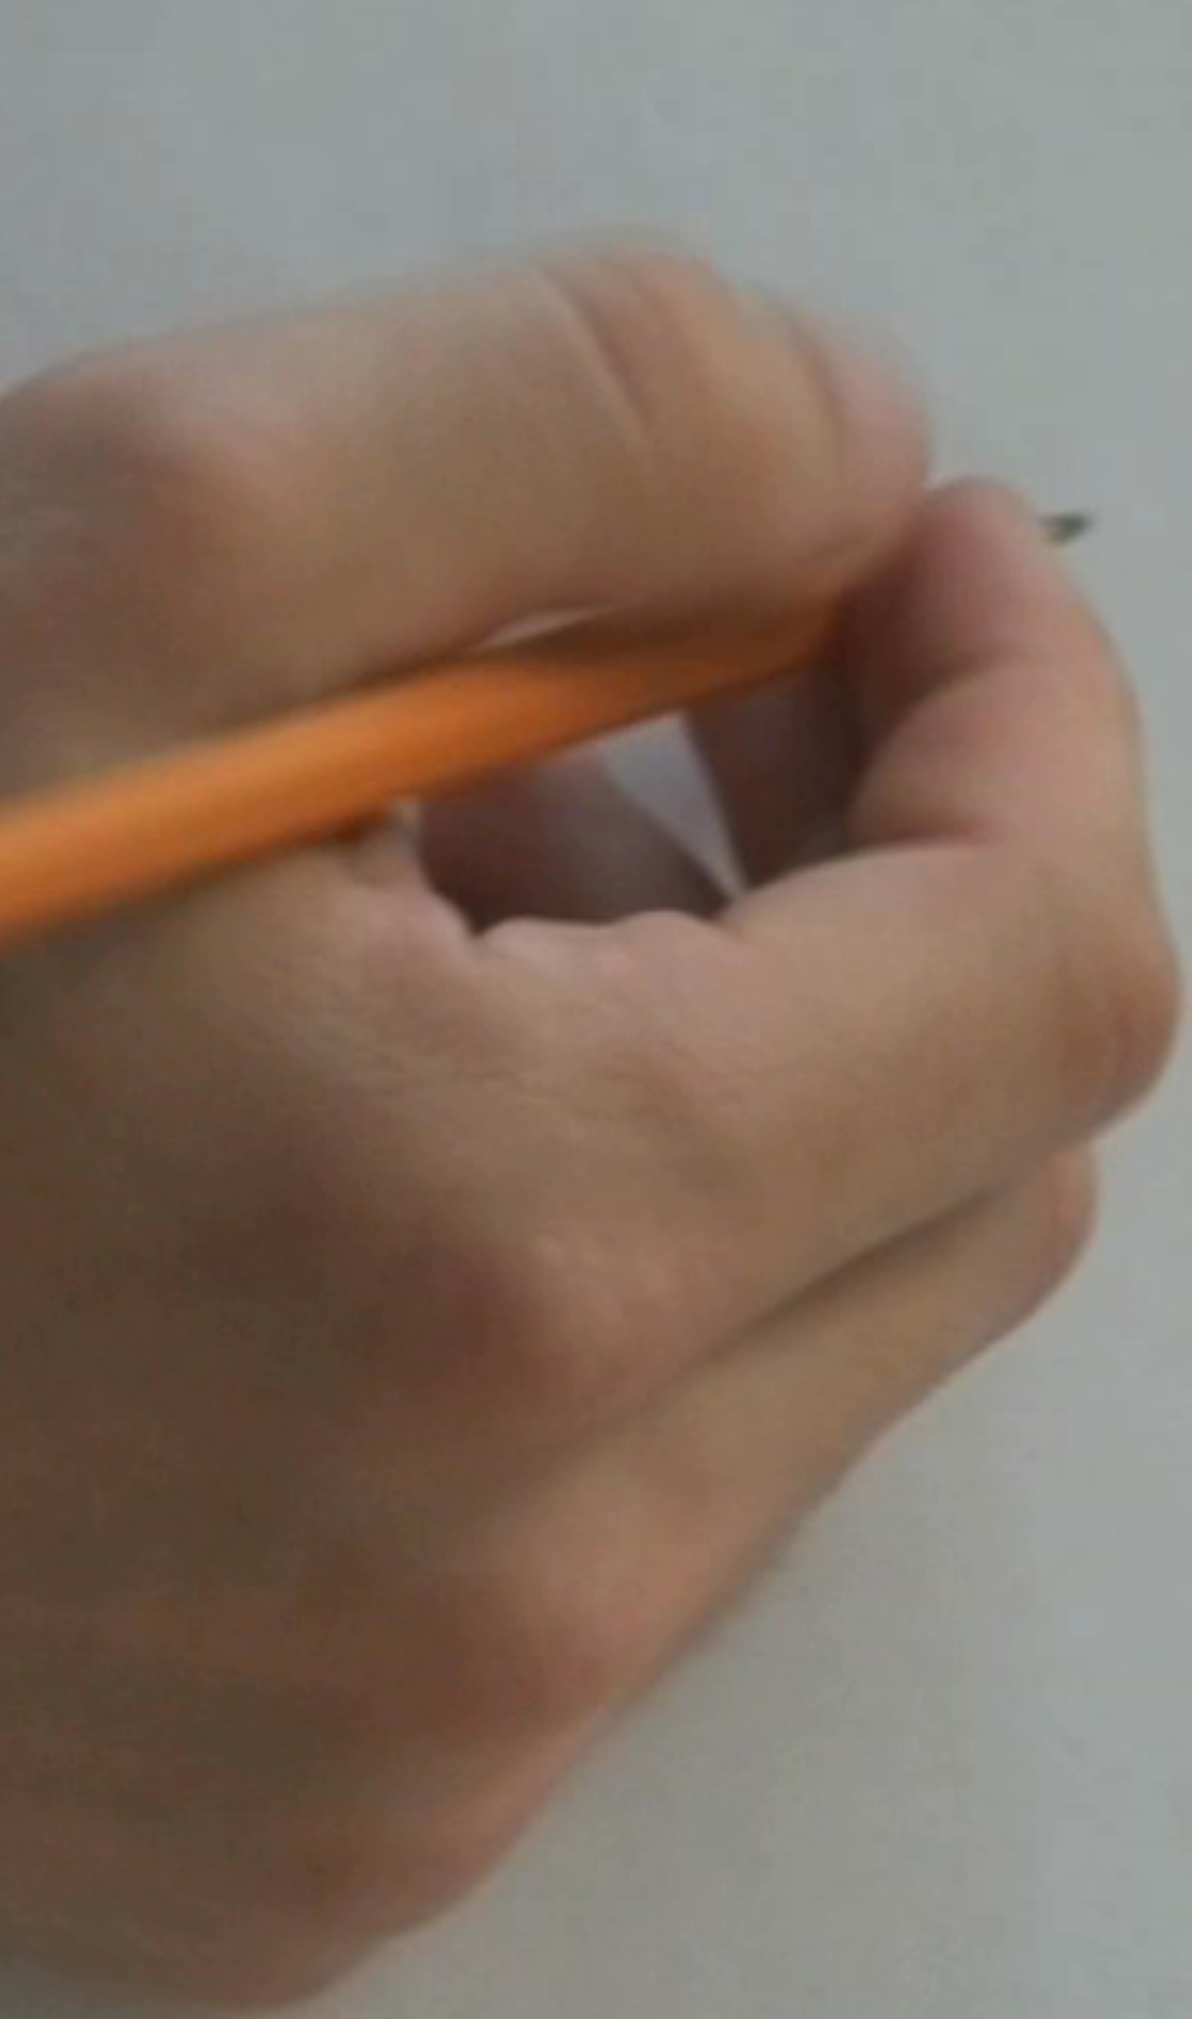
Interaction - live.

- Comments - what someone says on your site
- Trackback - when someone quotes your site on their site

websitetology

Smart software

- Server side software
- Automatically notifies search engines
- Time stamped, reverse chronological order
- RSS
- Themes/CSS



websitetology

WordPress

.com

- hosted blogging platform
- limited customization
- no e-commerce
- free hosting
- pay for upgrades

.org

- software repository
- Infinite customization
- e-commerce capable
- you pay hosting
- you own your content

websitetology

WordPress

- Is an Open Source, Content Management System
- It is an actively driven database application
- RSS is included
- Community can be included
- It pings Search Engines, every time you post

websitetology

WordPress

- Resides on a server running PHP, MySQL, Apache
- Works best with Firefox
- Requires no other software except a browser
- Allows multiple authors
- Creates legal code automatically
- Uses CSS for themes

websitetology

How to get to #1 in Google

- Alt tag for the blind
- Google alerts on key phrases
- Search your terms- write about top posts
- Use Categories smartly
- Update often
- Build relationships (links)

Posts, Pages, Categories, Tags

websitetology

a post is a news item that is in reverse chronological order. It has RSS

a page sits at the top level of navigation and is always available categories group posts by subject topic and create “super pages” for search. Categories can also have RSS tags link posts by keywords creating an index. They don’t have an RSS feed.
